Probe Reported Seeking 'Leak' at State Department

By the Associated Press

An investigation is reported underway at the State Department on how some secret information reached the press concerning Harvard University Prof. H. Stuart Hughes.

Hughes was disclosed last week to have been the subject of FBI-requested messages from the State Department to its Moscow and Paris Embassies, asking for a special watch on his activities.

The messages bore a classified, or secrecy, label, but the gist of what they said appeared in some published accounts.

G. Marvin Gentile, deputy assistant in charge of the State Department's security office was reported to have been given the responsibility for the security leak inquiry.

It was understood that this was part of a broader probe announced by Secretary of State Dean Rusk at a news conference Friday. Rusk said the investigation would extend into what procedures should be followed concerning messages about Americans traveling abroad.
